Congress.

There is general disgust with politics among Democrats. They never engaged in that basiness with any degree of profit-to the country.

The New York Tribune thinks Wis consin promises to be the most lively of the Western States for some time to come, and if the streets of her two principal cities do not run with blood before the fall it will be a mercy, simply because there was a bill introduced in the Legislature to move the capital from Madison to Milwaukee. That bill was introduced just to give the Milwaukee delegation something to do during the

The Gazette is in receipt of a very in teresting work compiled by Professor W. C. Whitford, ex-State Superintendent of Public Instruction, on plans and specifications of school houses for the country districts, villages and smaller cities of Wisconstn. It is an admirable work, and beside containing directions how to build school houses, of all sizes and of various material, it contains numerous illustrations, and can not but be an invaluable book to the district boards who have school houses to build.

When the anti-polygamy bill was before the House of Representatives for discussion, the remarks of Congressman Williams are reported by the associated press as follows: "He said secret vice, however prevalent and deplorable, could never be a justification for flagrant and open violation of public morals and public laws. Mormonism, with its adjunct, polygamy, robbed vice of his hideousness, and demanded that it should not only be sanctioned by public law, but deified by the Divine approval of God. Thus intrenched, it challenged criticism and defied attack. It disrupted and destroyed the family; it loosened the foundation of civil government; it removed the very corner-stone of Republican institutions; and, in turn, it controlled the ballot-box, commanded the courts, and, if entitled to its demand, it might command the Nation, man ships, march armies, and exercise all powers in its defense. While he would persecute no man, while he would give the widest liberty to conscience and religion, he would say to Oriental paganism, with its customs and demands, 'Thus far and no farther ! Where the clear waters of the Pacific kiss the pure sands of our Western shore, there you shall pause in the presence of the majestic power of the civilization of the noonday of the world." [Ap.

The bill to restore capital punishment was defeated in the Assembly on Wednesday night by a vote of 49 to 43. It passed the Senate one month ago by such a decided majority-20 to 7-that there seemed to be no doubt that the bill would be concurred in by the Assembly. But the sentementalists-those who seem to have more pity for the murderer than they do for the victim-succeeded in defeating measure. The lawless portion of the State, those liable to commit the deed for which hanging ought to be the penalty, will now feel like shaking hands with the champions against capital punishment. The bill which passed the Senate was a very carefully drawn bill and wise in its general provisions. It gave the jury the power to decide whether the crime committed was of such a coldblooded and fiendish nature as to warrant the hanging of the murderer, or whether there was sufficient circumstantial evidence connected with the crime, or some mitigating circumstances, as would justify the jury in deciding that imprisonment would be the most just. It would seem to a cool-headed person of unprejudiced mind, one who had the power to take a rational and common sense view of crime and its proper punishment, that the bill was so fair a one that there should have been no doubt as to a concurrence by the Assembly.

Well, the first effective blow against polygamy, has at last been struck. The Edmunds bill to destroy this last of the trim relics of barbarism, has passed both Houses of Congress. It will have to be returned to the Senate for the concurrence of that body in some amendments the House adopted, but they are not of material importance. A few weeks ago the Gazette published the chief features of the bill, and as it has virtually become a law, we reproduce them for the convenience of the readers:

THE LEGISLATURE.

Specal to the Gazette.

ASSEMBLY. Madison, March 16 .- In the Assembly a bill was passed authorizing the city of Milwaukee to take certain land in the Fourth ward for park purposes.

A long discussion arose over the bill providing an institution for deaf mutes. The Assembly finally refused to indefinitely postpone it, and it was recommitted to the committee on education. Considerable funny business took place in the committee of the whole. Elver was in the chair and the members took advantage of his ignorance of parliamentary law, and showered motions and amendments on him, and general pandemonium reigned, the members throwing books and files at each other, until the speaker finally stopped the fun by assuming the chair.

In the Senate a resolution was passed nstructing the committees to report all the Senate bills, now in their possesssion, on or before the 21st.

The resolution was adopted calling constitutional convention.

CITY CHARTERS.

Madison, March 15.—The order this morning in the Assembly was the recalling of charter bills which had passed both Governor. The principal ones recalled were those of Menomonee, Monroe, Portage and Green Bay. In all of them the serious constitutional error had been made, giving local officials the same military authority which is vested in the Governor by the constitution. Both Houses admitted the correctness of the Governor's views, and commended his action in allowing a recall.

SMALL-POX.

ELKHORN, Wis., March 15.-Three deaths from small-pox have taken place at Lyons. The disease is as yet confined to the German families of Shenkle and Hessler, the three dead above noted being two members of the Shenkle family and one of the Hessler that were buried the Gazette published the chief features as follows: One on Friday night, one on Saturday night, and the other on Sunday night. Another case is likely to terminate fatally in the first-named family. Whether proper medical aid and care has been afforded the afflicted we have no means of knowing, as in all infected districts facts wherein neglect is charged are often suppressed.

> Mr. J. Marsh, Bank of Toronto, Ont., writes: "Billiousness and dyspepsia seem to have grown up with me; having been a sufferer for years, I have tried many remedies, but with no lasting result until I used your BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. They have been truly a blessing to me, and I cannot speak too highly of them."

MASON.

WASHINGTON, March 15 .- A writ of habeas corpus has been applied for by Sergeant Mason, before Judge Wylie, on the ground that the court-martial had no jurisdiction of the case of assault with infers on a court-martial power to try such cases in time of war, insurrection, or rebellion only; that the sentence is excessi e and illegal.

THE FLOOD.

MEMPHIS, March 15 .- The Avalanche's Helena (Ark.) special says: "The overflow from this point presents the same sad outlook. The fall in the river and overflow in the city are not sufficiently perceptible to cause any joyful feeling in the hearts of those who have been left homeless. Around and about Helena, ranging about forty miles, there is nothing to be heard or spoken of except destitute cases caused by the overflow."

A gentleman just from Trenton says: The inhabitants were wholly unprepared for the flood. They thought in any event, the water would only reach from one to two feet in depth. They judged from the serious floods of 1862 and 1867. After the levee broke below Helena at 2 p. m., the water reached prising the people in their beds. Some, in consternation, fled to the hilly country for safety, and returned to look after found only vast ruins where their former homes stood. Their beds, bedding, and about in the water. Much of their stock was driven to high points, where they were supposed to be safe, but land which heretofore was looked upon as above overflow was soon covered with water, and the stock was drowning. There is but one house high enough to escape the water, and that is a gin house built ten feet above ground. Many of these people are drifting about on rafts, and some have taken refuge in public buildings at Trenton. Many are poor whites, and are left without the necessaries of life-have neither horses nor mules to make a crop, and the planting people are not able to hire labor, being already in debt to the merchants, and unless assistance from outside is given them it is a question how they can start new crops.

JUDICIAL.

MILWAUKEE, March 15 .- A spirited canvass for the judgeship of the Fifth circuit is reported from Mineral Point, the home of Judge M. M. Cothren. The circuit includes Grant, Iowa, Lafayette, Richland, and Crawford counties. George Clementson, a prominent Lancaster lawyer, is the Republican candidate against the present incumbent, M. M. Cothren. The chances seem to favor Clementson, who is a gentleman of unquestionable Houses and had been examined by the ability. Cothren was a candidate for the chief justiceship against L. S. Dixon, in 1863, and against Orsamus Cole for Associate Justice in 1880. He runs as an independent candidate this time, but he is a pronounced Democrat. In the Sixth Circuit A. W. Newman has been called out to run as an independent candidate. There is no opposition so far. He is a Republican, and has served in the Senate. In the Eleventh, the late Judge Henry D. Barron's circuit, Solon H. Clough, whom Barron succeeded, will be elected without opposition.

AN EXPLOSION IN A MILL.

DORCHESTER, March 15.—The boiler in Brucker, Ludloff & Co.'s mill at Bruckerville, four miles east of here, exploded at 6 o'clock last night. Both ends of the mill and considerable machinery were destroyed. George Sievers, engineer, and Charles Castle, a laborer, were blown many feet. Mr. Brucker arrived this morning with a surgeon. The injured men will recover. A new boiler will be put in and the mill be repaired at

THE FIRE RECORD.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., March 15 .- Two stables burned at Fort Leavenworth tonight with thirty horses, most of them belonging to the Seventh Cavalry. The fire started in the hay in the loft of one of the stables and spread rapidly, though seventy of the 100 horses that the stables contained were taken out. The loss is about $8,000.

MACON, Ga., March 15.-C. D. Anderson & Son's cotton warehouse and adjoining buildings burned; loss $50,000; insurance $28,000.

Sr. Louis, March 15 .- A dispatch from Little Rock, Ark, says the mission school in Indian Territory was destroyed by fire a few days ago, and four children were burned to death. Two of the victims were sons of the Rev. Mr. Haney, who has charge of the mission; another was a young daughter of Contractor Morrison, who was spending the night at the mission with one of her girl friends, and the other was an Indian boy.

IMPORTANT DECISIONS.

WASHINGTON, March 15-The Republicaus held a car us in the Hall of Representatives to-night, at which important action was taken. About 100 were present. Mr. Robeson presided.

Mr. Shellenbarger offered a resolution declaring that it was the sense of the caucus that the bill to reduce the tariff on Whisky, tobacco, and malt liquors, agreed to by the sub-committee of the Ways and Means should not pass. Only two spoke against the resolution, and these objections were finally withdrawn. All others spoke strongly of the resolution, and it was agreed to by unanimous consent.

There was also an implied understanding that there should be no opposition to the clause of the bill which grants an extension in time to whisky in bond.

The caucus also decided to support the tariff commission bill. The Chinese bill was not mentioned.

STORM AT EAU CLAIRE.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis March 15-The snow storm in this section last night seemed to be general in its extent and attained a depth of six inches. It is wet and it is feared will do more harm than good to oggers. A large number of prominent Mississippi lumber-men passed through this morning to attend the annual meeting of the Chippewa Lumber and Boom Company.

KILLED BY LIQUOR.

WATERTOWN, Wis., March 15.-The body of Patrick Mc Cueeney, an old resident here, was found in the river this morning. The supposition is that Mc-Cueeney, being considerably under the influence of liquor, lost his way in the snow-storm raging last night, and walked into the river and drowned.

ONLY THIRTEEN.

CARROLLTON, Ill., March 15.—George Benson, a boy only 13 years old, was ar rested on our public streets yesterday while drunk, and confined in the cit calaboose, and to-day died in prison from the effects of the debauch.

BANK FAILURE.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 15 .- The bank ing firm of Ralston, McQuaide & Co., of Fairview, Pa., suspended to-day. Liabilities between $200,000 and $300,000; assets not known.

SAFE BLOWING.

GREEN BAY, March 15 .- The office of nsurance agents Kimball & Libbey was broken into last night, and the safe robbed of $750.

How many pleasant recollections are called into being by that one word? Home! that sweet word has caused tears to flow unbidden to the eyes of a hardened criminal, or calmed his grosser passions. 'Tis the one haven of earthly rest. Should the outside world buffer one around, if he has a home-now I must be understood to mean a home where there is unison and sympathy among the inmates, not a mere place to eat, drink and sleep—when he goes home, heart-sore and weary from his contact with the world, how soon he will be refreshed! His spirits will be reani-mated; he will feel, let come what may, that he may retire to the bosom of his family and there find rest and contentment. Cannot one toil manfully all day with his hard duties, if he has a home in view? Will he not feel abundantly repaid for all his preseverance, to meet, on returning home, his wife, or sister, who is waiting and watching for him? Ah! how sweet to him will be the tender smile and loving kiss of welcome! They will be doubly sweet to him now, and he will thank heaven for giving him such love and tenderness.

Now to make home attractive and cheerful is woman's work. No home can be a home unless woman's presence can be discerned in the neatness and coziness of everything around. Some females may rave about politics and all such subjects, but if they could have their way they would put themselves where God Almighty never intended they ever should be placed.

'Tis man's duty to go forth and battle with the world; woman's work to govern that realm of bliss-home. When woman is raving about female suffrage, does she think she is wiser than man? No; she does not think any such thing. She is one of those masculine women who are too idolent and hardened to have a soft spot left in her bosom for such duties as are required to be done for "home, sweet home." Some women should not be allowed to invade the sanctum of those lovable women who rightly appreciate domestic felicity. A modest, sensitive woman will find her heart expanding around the family hearth, instead of growing contracted like those of worldly-minded women who think they have a call to go forth and govern the outside world, and let her own little world be governed by servants or by chance. Now, as home should be the dearest place on earth, it is the duty of every member of the family to make home as agreeable as possible, so that each of the inmates of that loved place may say with the poet :

Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home.' -E. D. B.

A London Dinner.

A lady well known in London literary circles has given a Shakspearean dinner and reception at her elegant and artistic house in Chelsea. The fair hostess appeared as Portia, and all her guests responded to her request and donned appropriate costumes. The effect of these correct and artistic Shakspearean dresses was very charming. Nearly a hundred guests sat down to dinner, and this was the bill of fare:

Salmon with Mayonaise Sauce: "The salmon's tail."—Othello, ii., 1. Boar's Head:
"The Boar's Head."—Henry IV., ii., 4.

Sirloins and Beef a la mode:
"A piece of beef and mustard."—Taming of the Shrew. Fore Quarter of Lamb: "Poor, innocent lamb."—Macbeth, iv., 1.

Roast Veal: "Brutal to kill so capital a calf." - Hamlet, iii., 2. Ham: "I pray you, is not the pig great?"-Titus Andronicus, iv., 2. Mayonaise of Chickens:
"Here's a fowl without a feather."—Comedy of Errors, iii., 1. Veal and Ham Patties: They are both baked in a pie."-Titus Andronicus, v., 3. Pigeon Pies:

"Some pigeons, Davy."-Henry IV., v., 1. Lobsters:
"Ill-shaped fish."—Romeo and Juliet, v., 1. Mayonaise Salad: "There is sauce for it."—Henry IV., v., 1. Puddings and Sweets: "Sweets to the sweet."—Hamlet.

Dessert: "Taste the fruit."-Pericles, i., 1. Wines: "Good wine needs no bush."—As You Like It.

An Unaccepted Invitation.

A man named Lehmaier of Rochester. N. Y., is making a singular crusade against flash newspapers. He says he was led to undertake it by seeing children gathered about the news stands looking at these Sunday mornings, and his method is to go where the publications are offered for sale, deliberately tear them up and invite the owner to have him arrested. He thinks that in a trial such facts would be developed as would stop the traffic. One newsman did have him arrested, but failed to push the matter to trial.

WMY GRANDPA DIDA'T HAVE MILK TOAST FOR SUPPER.

Jane Pritchard went to the big stone pot on the high bench in the cellar, got upon her tiptoes, took off the brown towel, and peeked in.

"Oh, there is one slice left?" she cried, joyfully. "And I'm a-going to take it. Betsey's to make bread tonight, 'cause I heard her say so; and we've got biscuit for tea Oh, goody, goody !

"O grandpa!" she exclaimed, rushing in and flying up to the bed. "I'm a-going to make you a slice of milk toast for supper-all alone by myself! The very beautifullest toast you ever saw,

"Hey?-what-hey?" said the old gentleman, turning over suddenly, and raising his head to stare at her in a bewildered 'way. "What's the matter? Is the house afire?"

"No," said Jane. And then she began to hop up and down in her delight. "I'm a-going to make you some toast, grandpa. Now, aint you so glad?"
"Oh yes, yes; to be sure—to be sure,"

said the old gentleman as briskly as he could, waked out of his beautiful nap, and blinking away at her with all his might. "Yes, yes; to be sure," he repeated, pleased to see her so happy.

So Jane dropped a kiss on his wrinkled face, and flew off down stairs again, closely followed by Button, who had allowed nothing to escape her big green "First thing," said Jane to herself, down in the kitchen, "I'm a-going to put on the mila to boil. I know, 'cause I've seen Betser don sixteen hundred-no, I quess forty manar d times. mine, for once."

She couldn't quite keep back the whole of the little sigh at the thought of the dry gingerbread, and bread and butter, without the lovely cup of fresh, sweet milk to go with it. But all the same, hottest of the stove covers.
"There," she said, with great satisfaction to Button, for want of other com-"Now, if I begin to toast my I can get all through, and have lots of time before supper.'

So she ran in again to the big stone pot on the high bench, fished out the one slice of bread, and reaching down the toaster from the man in the pantry, started off to try her luck before the glowing grate fire in the during-room. "Isn't time just ex ; - te!" she cried, down on her knees, and burning her hands and face just twice as much as the

Jane dropped toaster and all, into the nearest corner of the chimney jamb, and derted out into the kitchen on the wings of the wind. There was the milk-great waves and waves of white foam, puffing away clear over the top of the little cup, to race off in one mad sputter, all over Betsey's lean stove-top.

"Oh, my beautiful milk!" mourned Jane, clasping her hands in woe. "What shall I do?"

Button stepped gingerly up to the cone, and wrinkled up her nose with terest and expectation. Crackle-crack-crack-crack!

Jone bounced around, leaving the milk to its fate, and stepped over Button, to hurry back to her bread.

Alas! before she reached there, the smell of scorching toast told her very what had happened.

The toaster had turned over and slipped fown upon the bright coals; and there lay the beautiful slice of bread, a little

Jane only stopped to pick out the coasier, and set it up to cool a bit; then she went to the stairs, sat down on the lowest one, and cried till one, two, three, four, five, six o'clock told her it was time to set the table for tea. So that is the reason that grandpa didn't have milk toast for supper—the very same one why Jack didn't eat his supper-because there wasn't any!-Youth's Companion.

COMICAL CHILDREN.

I heard the cunningest little story of a little girl the other day. It is perfectly true, and exactly what Dolly Dimple might have done. The little girl wanted a great many things, amongst others a new doll. She had broken hers soon after Christmas, and to teach her to be careful her mother had said: "I will not buy you a new one until your birthday." But the birthday was very far off, and sissy thought she knew a better way. She had been with her auntie to the bank, and one day she put on her little hat, opened the street door, and slipped softly out, with a little slip of paper in her hand on which she had scribbled three or four queer little marks with a lead pencil. There were two banks near by, and to one she went as fast as her little feet could carry her. An old man was sweeping off the steps.

"Is this my auntie's bank?" asked little sissy.

"It's no place for children," said the old man; "go home." She trotted away, and asked an old apple woman on the corner where the other bank was. The apple woman pointed one out, and sissy made her way in, went up to the cashier's desk, and poked up toward his window the bit of scribbled paper.

"What's this?" asked the cashier, peeping out.

"My check," said sissy.
"Oh!" said the cashier. "Who are von?" "I'm Sissy," the little girl replied. "I must have some money, and I've come to get it out of the bank. That's my check. The cashier was a very good-natured man, and he took some money from his pocket and gave it to the child, who took it and went at once to a toy store, where she invested her money in a doll; and just as her terrified relatives had begun to despair of ever seeing her, she trotted into the house with the explanation:

"Good gracious! what you frightened about? I've only been to the bank to get the money for my check." Another little girl being lost in Broadway was found by a gentleman who took her into a toy store, bought her some toys, and asked the proprietor to keep her there awhile, at least until he could hand her over to some policeman. He himself had no time to wait, as he was obliged to catch a train, and thinking She came down from her tiptoes to of his own little ones at home he was clap her hands in glee, and then began anxious for the child's safety. The little to scamper off up stairs, followed by girl was well contented, and after a while should never be without a "shoe" to Button, the black cat, who raced and her mother, accompanied by a policeman, tore after her like all possessed, to the and in tears, was seen to pass the window. "That's my mamma," said the child. The proprietor of the store ran after the lady, and Miss Kitty was taken home in safety.

Shortly after this Kitty saw a little girl in the street crying. She stopped and asked her, "What's the matter?"
"Oh, I'm lost! I'm lost!" sobbed the child. "Oh, no matter," said Kitty, airily; "you'll get taken to a store, and have toys. Don't you cry. Your mam-ma will do crying enough for boff,"— New York Ledger.

A Black Butterfly.

Talking of superstition, a singular incident occurred in an express train journeying from Rio de Janeiro to San Paulo. A large black butterfly entered a first class car, and hovered about in such a remarkable way as to seriously excite the apprehensions of a lady who was on her way to see a sister who was gravely ill, for it is a common Brazilian superstition that the black butterfly forebodes death. A gentleman in the car sought to quiet the fears of the lady, and laughed at such presentiments. He then attempted to drive the unwelcome visitor out of the car, but the butterfly visitor out of the car, but the butterfly at once began hovering about him in a most persistent manner. Shortly after he began to feel ill, and in a brief time was a corpse. The man really died of heart di ase, hastened probably by his exertion to catch the butterfly; but if will be difficult to make many people believe otherwise than that the poor insect possessed some malign influence which brought death upon him.—Exchange.

FARM NOTES.

THE Landreth seed farm near Philadelpia is well supplied with guinea fowls, which prey upon destructive insects, but do not scratch up the ground.

So FAULTY are the present methods of shipping cattle to Europe, that of 981 cargoes, it seems that nearly 15,000 head perished from the casualities of the

AN EASTERN orchardist claims to have discovered that his apple trees can be made to bear abundantly every year by putting wood ashes and tanbark with the down, and poured its contents into a small tin cup, which she set on the very addition of some lime around the trees. THE N. E. Farmer says "lamb sought to be castrated before they are three weeks old, to avoid the danger when more mature. In fly time a coat of tar should be applied to the wounded part externally.

THE French in Algeria are trying ostrich farming successfully. A pair of adult birds furnish thirty eggs yearly, which are hatched by an incubator. In a short time the young birds each represent a value of 100 francs.

THE Germantown Telegraph suggests that turkeys can be raised as cheaply by the pound as chickens, and they sell higher in the market. Both require to be well fed during the winter, but in the summer the turkeys obtain all the food they want in their foraging expeditions.

MR. MAJ. THORP, of French Creek, W. Va., has patented a shed, which he claims is turned about by a windmill so as to shelter cattle from storms coming from any direction. We apprehend it will be very liable to get out of order and that the anticipated advantages might be realized by sheds constructed around a hollow square.

PROF. BAIRD, the U. S. Fish Commissioner, declares the carp to be the far-mer's fish, because it is, he thinks, singularly adapted to the wants of farmers. and capable of being raised in natural or artificial bodies of water where most kinds of fish would not live. The carp, however, so easily raised, is not a game fish, nor so desirable to the taste as perch, bass, etc., which may easily be bred on all farms which are well supplied with cold spring water.

Colman's Rural observes "the use of twine binders is expanding as an important industry in the Northwest. The advantage of cord as bands for sheaves has turned the attention of farmers and manufaturers to the necessity of cultivating the plant from which such cord can be economically made." It is true. chine. The price of the full sized cutter is about $100, and the smaller ones will that the cultivation of flax, hemp, jute, and textiles generally, is rapidly augsell for perhaps half that sum." menting in this country.

A CORRESPONDENT of the New York Tribun writes on the subject of the prevention of hog cholera as follows: Prevention is better than cure for hog cholera in about the ratio of fifty to one, and to this end there should be a shelt red place of rest with plenty of dry absorbent earth to lie on; abundance of good air; sheds sweetened by whitewashing once in three months; clean water to drink, and salt, sulphur and sulphurous soft coal or charcoal always accessible. An entire change of food from corn to potatoes, mangolds and carrots, cooked and raw, often as once a week. The exclusive use of corn failing to excite certain digestive activities may result in a weakness favorable to the progress of cholera. Separation also into small herds is well. Boars also of strong constitution should be carefully selected, untainted by cholera, or the progeny may be tainted by a choleraic dist esis so that the disease will develop on slight causes."

Existing Follies.-Many of our farmers are buying large quantities of fertilizers at high prices, who annually permit tons of manure to go to waste about their barnyards. The accumulahanled away from the barn and yard, and it is much better to make it serve as a lettilizer than not. We advocate the use of commercial fertilizers only when there is not manure in sufficient quantities. T. e use of poor farming implements will be found to be far more expensive to the hasbandman than would the purchasing of the best quality on the market The cheap implements will be constantly requiring to be repaired. They bring a source of expenditure without any income. I have frequently seen hands lose the greater part of a day in requiring the implements with which they were at work, and at the same time the work was badly needed.-

Correspondence Cincinnati Gazette. WE ONCE heard an enthusiastic admirer of the sex say that, in his opinion, the most beautiful sight in the world was a lady gracefully riding on horseback. The man was not a bachelor either, so that the honesty of his assertion can not be questioned. . Whether the critic was correct or not, it is positively certain that horseback riding by ladies could be practiced to a much greater extent than it is to the advantage of the equestrians. Every young woman possessed of good nerve should be taught to ride at an early age—to sit squarely upon the saddle, handling the rein with a light hand and conforming her motions with those of the horse. The fabled Centaur embodied the composite figures of a horse and a male rider, but the lithe and graceful form of a woman mounted on a spirited steed exceeds the poetic conception of the mythologic ancients. Their riding habit should be merely long enough to cover the foot when she is seated in the saddle, and the stirrup prevent the rider's foot from being driven home too far. A more horrible accident can hardly be imagined than a lady thrown from a frightened horse dragging by the stirrup. An excursion of a considerable distance never ought to be at-tempted until the rider, by private prac-tice, or by long habit from childhood, be confident of her seat and rein. Horseback riding by women would often prevent complaints to which the sex is inci-dent, and thus alleviate a portion of suf-fering to which they are liable.

THE SILO SYSTEM.—We remarked a year ago that during the next twelvemonth a large amount of experience would be evolved in the work of ensilage. A number of silos were constructed in New England, New York, and other Eastern States by able or wealthy farmers, and many of these pub-lished accounts of their operations and degrees of success during the last winter and spring. We read all that came under our observation, and can not recollect a discouraging account. Results, in every instance, justified the expectations of the experimenters. From time to time, correspondents have plied the Gazette with questions, both in regard to the construction of silos and in reference to the experimental and its comence to the system itself and its com-parative merits as a fodder preserver. These letters we have answered to the best of our ability, and we now publish a statement from an Eastern contem-porary, which will at once instruct the reader how to construct a sile, and show him how sincerely some experienced parties are convinced of the utility of the European mode of storing and preserving green food for stock. Says the B. C. Intelligencer: "A very large sile is now approaching completion in the storing and preserving green food for stock. B. C. Intelligencer: "A very large silo is now approaching completion just outside of Doylestown, on the Smith farm, the largest one yet constructed in the world perhaps. The structure is forty feet square, nineteen feet deep to the top of the walls, and twenty-six feet to the rafter plates. It is divided by strong walls into four compartments, mainly for convenience in filling. Each one of these compartments is a big hole, the cubical contents being over 8,000 feet. It will require fully three days to fill one of these pits. The combined capacity of the four apartments is nearly 33,000 cubic feet—a very large space. The walls are built of concrete, are two feet thick, and the inside surfaces fully cemented. The stones were all dug out cemented. The stones were all dug out of the hole made for the silo, as the rock was reached only a few feet below the surface. Some idea of the material required to construct the silo may be formed from the amount of cement used. There is a pile of empty cement barrels as large as a good sized house. The weather was unfavorable for a good deal of the time for speedy work, as the operations could not be conducted in the rain. This prevented finishing the work rain. This prevented finishing the work in time to ensilage the present grass crop, as was the intention. Sixteen acres of corn have been planted for ensilage, though it is quite probable that this will not much, if any, more than half fill the pits. A cattle stable forty feet square will be built adjoining the silo for convenience in feeding. There is to for convenience in feeding. There is to be a ten-horse power engine set up to do the cutting of the ensilage, and other Minnesota and Dakota Lands work about the place needing power Everything is to be constructed with a view to complete convenience and thorough ness, under the eye and direction of a practical machinist. The matter of the silo will be thoroughly tested under the most favorable conditions, and its value. as the case may be, will be clearly shown. The gentleman engaged in this enterprise is a level headed, practical man, perfectly competent to fully and fairly test the innovation. He is well convinced in his own mind that it will be a success. He has visited most of the silos in this country, and many of those in France, Belgium and Germany, and is going at the work now with all the knowledge a man could have short of that gained from actual experience. He has invented a new machine for cutting fodder, which looks like a good one. He claims that it will cut ten tons of green corn per hour into § inch lengths. The

A Tarkish Wedding Reception.

An invitation to a Turkish wedding came to us through the wife of an Italian physician, and was for "ten o'clock"a strange hour we thought—but t proved to be ten o'clock Turkish, which is about three o'clock in the afternoon, a la Frank. Turkish time is reckoned by the sun, and is always a problem to people keeping Frank time; and the Turks, to be exact, must have their watches changed every

We were a party of eight—all ladies; no gentlemen must be seen in the haremlik, though this reception was at the house of the bridegroom. The sons take their brides to the father's house, and ff it becomes crowded additional rooms are

We found the gates of the outer wall thrown wide open. A man servant stood inside to see that all left the overshoes in the court. To those of us who had not worn shoes that could be removed he made a deprecatory salaam, as if to say:
"Your pardon, ma'am," and wised our shoes with a damp sponge. (how much time and patience—yes, and money—our housewives would be saved if a like cleanly custom existed in America, for I fancy this is one secret of the Turkish carpets lasting for generations; that no dirt from the streets is ever brought in on to them.)

We were then motioned to go up the stairs and were first taken to the mother of the bridegroom, who was seated on a high divan, and received us with many salaams, but did not rise. She had a quilted sacque, of delicate lemon-colored satin, lined and trimmed with fur, thrown over her shoulders (the morning had been rainy and it was still cool,) and her other garments were made of rich Oriental stuffs; her head handkerchief was plain, but decorated in front with dia-

A young lady dressed in drab silk, made in the latest Parisian fashion, with feathers and diamond ornaments in her hair, received us standing, asked us to be seated and ordered coffee to be brought | gists. to us. We sat upon low divans which | ville. were built next to the walls of the room. and are piled with cushions covered with beautiful embroidery in silk and gold thread. The coffee was brought by three servants, one bearing the silver tray with the tiny china cups and zarfs (holders) of filigree silver, set with gems; another the coffee-pot, which was silver, and was carried in an elaborate dish hung by long silver chains, resembling an incense burner, and the third handed us the cups.

After a time "sweatmeats" were brought and served with great elegance.

The water was in gold goblets, the spoonholders of Bohemian glass, set in silver frames, and the jars for the "sweets" equally rich and elegant. But partaking of the talli is not casy if not to the "manner born." I had fortunately had previous lessons and could do it | finally said : "Well, just let me see his native fashion. A goblet of water is pro-vided for each guest; two spoonholders, The next morning I started with one for the spoons before they are used | friend to Mr. Clay's house, and found and one for soiled spoons. You take a spoon, fill it with talli (which is always something very sweet and delicious, either made of oranges, citron, currants, with the seeds all picked out with a needle, rose petals, or what is most delicious, a sugar paste flavored with flowers, violets, acacia, lavender, etc.), take it all into the mouth, place the spoon in the proper holder, take a glass of water and drink until the talli is entirely washed down the throat. This must be done as speedily as possible, however much you may wish to have the "sweetness long drawn out." We remained in this room some time, those who knew Turkish, carrying on the conversation. The elderly ladies seemed to be assembled here. Many of them were dressed in broosa gauzes and silks, made in quaint, simple fashion, but wearing rich jewels—one were the handsomest emerald ring I have ever seen. While the visiting was at its height a lady spread her prayer carpet in a corner of the room, with her face toward Mecca, threw a light shawl over her head, and went through with her de-votions, often bowing her head to the floor. No one seemed to mind it at all, and when she arose she immediately joined again in the conversation.

From this room we were conducted to the room where the bride was to sit in state.

At one end of the room was a very high divan, so high as to require a step to climb on to it, covered with satin of bright colors, and over it were branches of artificial flowers and tinsel ornaments, forming quite a canopy. The room was handsomely furnished—chairs and sofas covered with damask silk, window draperies of the same material and carpet to match in color. The ceiling was beautifully frescoed in arabesque pat-terns. The seats were gradually filled with elegantly dressed ladies—silks and satins with long trains, feathers and diamond ornaments in the hair. One dress of lemon-colored satin elaborately trimmed with white lace and estooned with flowers, was especially rich and

The bride was led in by two elderly women very simply dressed except for the diamonds flashing on their turbans, and followed by a little girl bearing her train. She walked very deliberately through the long room and climbed to her place under the canopy of flowers. The women took seats on either side of her and the little girl took a seat on the step in front of the divan. The dress of the bride was of blue silk covered with embroidery in gold thread and seed pearls. The veil was blue gauze, to match the dress, and fell to the floor; over this was gold tinsel in fine threads, hanging in masses as long as the veil. These were fastened with a tiara of diamond ornaments, sprays of flowers and leaves, and diamonds were stuck upon her forehead, each cheek and the chin, and she wore several rings outside of her gloves. We had no scruples about gazing at her, for she was there to be looked at. She could not move a muscle of her face, as you can imagine, with all those orna ments upon it. She did not appear young or beautiful, which was not strange with such disfigurements. In an outer room the "unbidden" ruests assemble. On such occasions the house is open for every one to come into the hall in the centre of the house, and the bride was led out for the common people to get a look at her rangnificence. There was a crowd of village women in yashmak and feredji coming and go-

Behind a screen in this hall were musicians who make the fun of the casion. Turkish music is unlike any other-hardly classic-but it is more thrilling and exciting than any I have ever heard. Some of the natives peeped behind the screen, and therewas giggling and laugh-ing, but I suppose it was too Oriental for us to be allowed to see or hear much with gold embroidery, the other pink silk, thickly set with gilt spangles.

The wedding festivities continue a week, partly at the home of the bride and partly at the home of the groom. The reception which I have described is about the last. Then the life with the mother-in-law begins. The bride cannot speak in her presence, unless she is given permission, for years, perhaps not ever, if she takes a dislike to her, and she is called the bride until a newer-married person is brought to the house. - Constantinople Cor. ## A Clergyman's Canary.

The Rev. Dr. Day is fond of canaries, and the bay window in his library is occupied by a large number of these favorite songsters, to some of which are given the freedom of the entire room at times. One of these is very much interested in penmanship, and will watch Dr. Day write by the hour. The black line left by the pen in its travels is the greatest of mysteries to the bird, and he will follow it as it spins out across the page, and make frequent examinations, first with one eye and then with the other, but can never quite understand it all, and after scratching his head with his claw he will follow the line across again. This he will keep up by the hour, and it would be interesting to know his thoughts on the subject-if canaries ever do have thoughts .- Titusville (Penn.) Herald.

Henry Clay's Courtesy. I think I never saw a more perfect gentleman than Henry Clay. He was always considerate of the feelings of his brother man, and even when sorely tried never said or did anything which could possibly offend the lowliest of them. I recall an instance of this. There lived here in former years a man named Garbard, who, though a rough fellow, was an ardent admirer of Mr. Ciay and a personal acquaintance. During one of Mr. Clay's visits Garbard came up to the springs, arriving at night in a sad condition of intoxication. He wanted to know where Mr. Clay was, and insisted upon seeing him. With some difficulty we persuaded him that he must wait until morning, and he

The next morning I started with a him surrounded with distinguished gentlemen, both of this country and abroad, There were Senators and Judges and foreign Ambassadors present, all engaged in discussing, I believe, some intricate question of foreign policy. The gentle-men present would throw out some problem or other, like a tub to a whale, for Mr. Clay to play with, as it were. Mr. Clay was seated at the end of the room furthest from the door when who should come marching into the room but Mr. Garbard, He had with him, too, an Italian dwarf, in fantastic dress, with bells on his hat, who was a ventriloquist and a mountebank generally. Of course the appearance of such a couple in such an assemblage created no little commo-

Garbard pulled his hat off, and, marching up to the man of Ashland, said: 'Good-morning, Mr. Clay."

"Good-morning, Mr. Garbard," said "Well, Mr. Clay, continued the other, "I know you are a good judge of men and are fond of music, so I brought this man up to amuse you. He can imitate any kind of an animal in the world, and I'll have him go through his programme for you. Everybody else in the room was abashed at the man's forward manner, but Mr. Clay arose and stepped forward as though he was interested in the ex-

Then the fellow began his imitations, I could not stand it, and went out of the room, as did many others. Finally, Mr. Clay went up to the fellow, and, taking $5 bill from his pocket, said :

"I appreciate your efforts, but I know you must be extremely fatigued from your exercises, and trust you will not attempt anything further," and the man went off.

The discussion was never resumed, and the party all came down on to the grounds after that, but it was the finest exemplification of "a step from the sub-lime to the ridiculous" that I ever witnessed .- Dr. Moorman, in the Cincinnati Commercial.

The Wounded Horse.

Pity and kindness have a wider range of subjects than the sufferers of our own race and kind. Touching pictures like the following will meet and appeal to every observer more than once in a life-

In the year 1870, during the sad war between France and Germany, a newspaper correspondent was visiting the town of Bazeilles, in France, which had just been the scene of a battle. Among many other distressing sights suggestive of the miseries of war, which were to be found on every hand, he particularly mentions the following interesting story, which teaches its own lesson:

In the fields, just outside the city, there was a miserable-looking horse, standing motionless, with his off foreleg poised in the air.

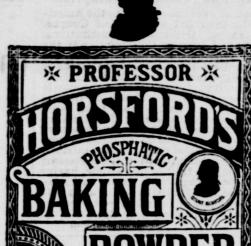

We went up to him, when, without moving in the least, the poor beast turned his great blue orbs from one to the other of us, saying, as plainly as looks could do, "For mercy's sake, gentlemen, help me if you can." One of us examined the leg, and soon found that a bullet had lodged in the crown of the hoof, which was very much swelled and sore, and the flies had been dreadfully busy with it.

Of course, to cut it, and remove the cause of a month's agony, was but the work of a few minutes; and if you could have seen how grateful the old fellow was when he put his hoof to the ground and found that he could once more limp that horses can speak with their eyes almost as well as human beings. It is terrible to think what that wretched animal must have suffered during his long days and nights of agony since first that stinging throb came in his foot and he was left alone in his misery. - Youth's Companion.

and in the morning, at 10 o'clock, mass will be celebrated in St. Patrick's church, by the pastor, Rev. Father McGinmity. In the evening, at 7:30 o'clock, at the church, a lecture, appropriate to the occasion, will be delivered by Rev. Father O'Keef, of Watertown.

-Janesville has some very naughty boys, and some who are up to all manner of tricks and devices to make a penny or two. It now turns out that the squad of little urchins employed in catching the escaped chickens on West Milwaukee street yesterday afternoon, were the same ones that disarranged the coop to let the poultry out. They received a nickle apiece for each chicken

-Wm. Lepper, who was convicted in the municipal court, a week or so ago, for assaulting Wm. Burrell, at the Northwestern freight depot, was turned loose to-day, his sentence having expired. The Sheriff has two other warrants for him, one issued by a justice at Milton, charging him with drunkenness, the other for throwing a switch open here in the city. It is not yet known what will be done with the

-William Reynolds was to-day convicted in the municipal court on the charge of robbing the money drawer at Mr. Canary's saloon, near the depot, of two dollars, and was sentenced to the county jail for sixty days at hard labor. Henry Wilson, who was in his company at the time of the arrest, was convicted of vagrancy, and given a bread-and wa ter diet for ten days at the jail. Both individuals have been in custody before, and had just been turned loose.

-The town of Union, by its treasurer, Mr. A. Eager, has settled the State and county tax with the county treasurer, paying the entire amount of real estate tax, amounting to $6,359.57, and returned only $15.24 personal property tax as uncollected. The town of Union pays the largest tax of any of the towns in Rock county, and stands second, so far in the prompt payment of taxes; the town of Porter being the first, paying the entire tax-both real and personal.

-Mr. A. L. Eager, formerly of this city, and a brother of William A. Eager, now of Anamosa, Iowa, was in the city decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe to-day. Mr. Eager went to Iowa fifteen years ago this spring, and engaged in farming. The past season he raised a crop of tobacco, and has just marketed the same at Edgerton, Wisconsin, he deemed that a better market place for the weed than any point west. Mr. Eager, is looking hale and hearty, and says farming agrees with him well. He will be heartily welcomed by his many acquaintences in the city.

A Remarkable Case of Tax Collection For Weak Lungs and Consumption

For the year 1881 the city tax levy for Janesville amounted to $50,597.75. All of this large amount was collected with out stress except the trifling sum of $240.-13. There were thirty-nine descriptions offered for sale in the delinquent tax list, and by this means every cent of the $50,-597.75 was collected.

There is a good deal of meaning in these facts, especially in the one that the entire city tax amounting to so large a sum, was so easily collected without process, save the small amount of $240. Never before in the history of the city has the delinquent tax list been so small. This fact is proof of one thing that the tax payers are abundantly able to meet their tax obligations and that they do it promptly. It would be safe to say that there is no city in the State whose city tax roll reaches $50,000, that can show so small a delinquent tax list as Janesville. It is a pubhe notice that our people as a rule are well-do-do and that the financial condition of the city is remarkably

It would be difficult at this time to find a city in the Union containing a population of ten thousand, with four millions of taxable property whose finances are more satisfactory, or whose debt is smaller, or bonds at a greater premium, than those of Janesville. Six years ago, when the Galaxy Monthly, of New York, published Mr. Porter's grea article on the municipal indebtedness of the United States, Janesville stood six on the point of financial excellence among one hundred and thirty-five picked cities of the Union. She is even better now than at that time, and doubtless in comparison with the other five cities, has advanced beyond some of them. Mr. Haselton, our efficient city treasurer, is no doubt proud of this showing of the office in which he has long and so ably presided, and well he may be, for it is not given to many city treasurers to be so fortunate.

Alice Oates as "La Mascotte." Next Monday night Alice Oates, the actress, will appear in Janesville with her superb company, producing that splendid comic opera "Mascotte." In this character she is unrivaled in this -To-morrow will be St. Patrick's day; country. She has no peer, in fact, on the opera bouffe stage, and wherever she appears, crowded houses and hearty applause greet her. One of our exchanges says of Alice Oates and her company:

"Turner Opera house was crowded, jammed and packed last night by one of the most fashionable and thoroughly appreciative audiences ever assembled m our amusement-loving city to witness the first appearance in this city of Alice Oates, supported by a splendid company, in La Mascotte, one of Audrian's most brilliant and successful comic operas. Alice Oates is a bright, charming little woman, full of life and spirit, and the most charming comic opera singers in the country. "Prince Frederic was well represented in the person of Miss Alice Townsend, a most charming and petite little lady, who sings and acts well. Miss Townsend has the handsomest figure we have ever seen on the stage. Although dressed in (well filled) tights, she appears withal modest. "Miss Ella Caldwell, as Flametta, did well. She possesses a clear, sweet, yet strong and powerful voice, and frequent applause showed the appreciation by the audience of her efforts.

"Mr. Chas. H. Drew as Pippo, a shepherd, charmed the audience by the able rendition of the many fine songs allotted to him by the author, and the scenes between him and Miss Oates were really musical treats."

-Janesville has some policemen who deserve to be presented with wooden medals lined with sole leather. Three young fellows stole two or three firkins of butter and hid them in a lumber yard. The officers, three in number, discovered the scheme, and resolved to let the butter remain there until the boys came atter it. While they were guarding the supposed cache, the thieves were disposing of the property in Chicago. The policemen pent several hours patiently watching for the coming of their "own true loves." -Relait Outlook

Truth should be spoken and justice done the officers in Janesville in regard to the stolen butter. It has been learned that the butter was taken from the lumber yard where it had been secreted, be fore the officers went on guard, and are therefore in nowise to blame for any movement the thieves made in the premA POPULAR TONIC

No preparation ever introduced to the American public, for the relief and cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Debilitated Constitutions, Weakness of the Lungs, or Consumption in the incipient or advanced stages of the disease, has ever met with the indorsements of physicians or patients as the celebrated "Tolu, Rock and Rye." The repeated and continued sales of the article everywhere are the best evidence of its real merits. Letters and testimonials from every quarter of the country, attesting the stimulating, tonic and healing effects, are in possession of the proprietors, and can be adduced to continue the most skeptical reader of its intrinsic virtues. Further commendation is unnecessary and superfluous, as a trial of this article, having a pleasant taste and agreeable flavor, will satisfy all those who are afflicted or pining away with pulmonary weakness of the relief to be secured by the use of Tolu, Rock and Rye.—Chicago Times.
